Letters From Oberlin Alumni

Reverberations from the Trustee Election

Chicago, Illinois
October 5, 1940

Dear Mr. Shaw:

Have been shocked and grieved to hear of the radical activities of Oberlin and of the moral degeneration that has taken place. Jerome Davis is even listed in Mrs. Dilling's "Red Network." Am glad that a "house-cleaning" is approaching.

Glee Maccek, '14

New Canaan, New Hampshire.
October 4, 1940.

Dear 31 Alumni:

Regret I cannot agree with the purpose of your circular letter in regard to the electioneering done on behalf of Jerome Davis, or the reasons you give in support of it.

Seems to me a very good sign if alumni will take such an interest in the election of a member of the Board of Trustees as to campaign for him. It is my opinion that Jerome Davis is not only the kind of man we could do well with on the Oberlin Board of Trustees, but that these are times when we would need his particular influence most.

Although you may be right, technically, about setting a precedent for financial backing in Board of Trustee elections, Jerome Davis or the Oberlin people who would take the initiative to support him, are hardly the ones to get worried about. As far as I know, Davis has given his life practically to fight creeds and practices which involve insidious forms of patronage. To make the democratic habit of honest campaigning, however, appear merely the servant of "financial backing" is giving a double twist to things.

As for the material sent out to give the "background and qualifications for trustee of all the candidates" at the expense of the college, it is invariably so meagre that it is impossible to make more than a blindfold choice. I did not happen to receive any of the "gratuitously supplied additional information" about Mr. Davis. I wish I had—and as well for some of the other candidates.

Yours for greater faith in legitimate democratic processes . . . and more information about all BT candidates,

S. L. Catlin, '37

Los Angeles, California.
October 8, 1940.

Dear Mr. Shaw:

. . . The unexpressed reason for the protest (against the organized campaign on behalf of trustee candidates), I have no doubt, was that the signers were afraid that on account of Davis' advanced sociological views he would give offense to the rich men who might otherwise make donations to the College. It was for this reason that he was dismissed from Yale. As for me, it was just for this reason that I, quite independently of the campaign, voted for him, and shall continue to vote for him whenever I have the opportunity.

Disgustedly yours,

Edward S. Steele, '72

P. S. I also voted for Jerome Davis without having received the circular supporting his candidacy.

Helen S. Pratt, '06

Los Angeles, California.

October 8, 1940.

Dear Mr. Shaw:

I am in full sympathy with the move against "organized solicitation of votes" in the election of Oberlin Trustees. The "circularized letter" has not come to me, or I would have replied in emphatic condemnation of that procedure.

Oberlin high standards forever!

J. L. Meriam, '95

October 7, 1940

Dear Mr. Shaw:

I received a letter advocating the election of Jerome Davis as a trustee, and thought it an excellent idea. I also received a letter from 31 alumni deploring organized campaigning, and appealing for "clinging steadfastly to traditional procedure." The latter argument seems to me to have little merit.

Clark L. Robinson, '32

Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Shaw:

I received recently a letter signed by a number of alumni in re the matter of a campaign having been conducted for Jerome Davis as trustee. I wish to state that although I voted for Mr. Davis, I was not a recipient of such a campaign letter. I trust that this will be an end to counter-campaigns, as well as to campaigns!

David R. Wabl, '31

Dear Secretary Shaw:

Just recently I have received a mimeographed letter dated September 30, signed by 31 Oberlin alumni setting forth reasons for "steadfastly clinging to the traditional procedure for the election of Oberlin trustees without expenditure," and stating that they have seen a circular dated September 7, advocating the election of Jerome Davis, '13, to the Board of Trustees of Oberlin College, and that they object to any organized solicitation of votes.

I am not so sure if this circular letter that they mention represents such a serious digression from the usual method of electing a member to the Board of Trustees, but if it is, it appears to me that this circular of September 30, signed by 31 individuals protesting against such a circular, is, after all, just another circular attempting to influence any one from voting for Jerome Davis. If the signers of this circular of September 30 condemn the circular of September 7, it appears to me that they have likewise condemned themselves!

I can't help but feel that after all the reason for this second circular of September 30, is only a veiled attempt to eliminate Jerome Davis as a candidate on account of some of his public statements. I don't myself agree with everything that Jerome Davis has published or written or spoken over the radio, but I sincerely believe that we need more men of his calibre who have the backbone to say what they think in this free country of ours. Any attempt by any group to bridle free speech is against American traditions. I can see a real advantage in having some member of the Board of Trustees who might be considered to represent the left wing. Two or three other Oberlinites who received this September 30 letter feel as I do and actually, on account of the circular, were influenced to cast their votes for Jerome Davis.

October 16, 1940

Dear Mr. Shaw:

I have been the recipient of two letters from Oberlin alumni, one advocating the election of a certain alumnus (Jerome Davis, to the Board of Trustees), the other protesting against organized campaigning for election of Trustees.

As I recall my classes with Professor Wolfe of the Sociology Department, and others, I know why some men of Oberlin are liberals. For they are disciples of a Professor, restless with an unquenchable thirst for justice, ever searching for a better social order.

Many of you know, as I know, that the capitalists have sought to decapitate the trustee nominee in question. I doubt the sincerity of the letter of September 30, in the statement that the organized solicitation of votes "tends to favor a candidate with financial backing." For this candidate, because of his stand for liberalism, has been threatened with the loss of his professional livelihood. It is only fair to be cognizant of the motives back of actions. Some of you know, as I know, that those who circularized the letter of September 7 (favoring Davis' candidacy) were sticking their necks out to the same forces which have tried to overthrow the nominee they desired to honor. They care enough for certain principles to incur the risk.

By the way, many of the thirty-one (signers of the second letter) hail from around New York City. I wonder if some of them may not have connections with Wall Street, perchance?

I grant you that the circularizing of letters on behalf of a candidate might not be wise as a precedent. But I think the occasion, when social progress of many years' effort may be thrown in reverse by organized wealth, that such an occasion justifies the actions of those who sent the letter of September 7.

We see a great deal of physical hunger and also much of intellectual and spiritual hunger. Many of these war refugees have never before had a chance to hear the Gospel. One is reminded of the old lady receiving a basket of provisions in famine-time in Ireland, and exclaiming, "Faith and it's starving we would all be, if it wasn't for this famine."

It is indeed a pleasure to dispense the relief funds sent out from America. I think the beneficiaries are aware of the generous motives that prompt the far-away givers.

Among other duties, I have been acting as superintendent of our mission hospital. A few days ago I remarked to our staff that they should be thankful not only that they have the skill to relieve suffering, but also that they have the experience and the message to bring real comfort to the afflicted.

Alumni Trustee Election Results Announced

The College Secretary's office has announced the election of Dr. Luther Gulick, '14, and the re-election of Dr. Henry J. Haskell, '96, to the Board of Trustees of Oberlin College, as a result of the recent vote by Oberlin alumni. An unusual amount of pre-election campaigning featured the alumni trustee election this year, with the result that the number of alumni voting increased some 12% over that of last year. Alumni have both condemned and commended campaigning for candidates in the alumni trustee elections, as may be seen by the letters printed in another part of this issue.

Alumni are reminded that for some four years a committee of the Alumni Association has been studying the procedure used in nominating candidates for election as alumni trustees. The committee's recommendations were approved by the Oberlin Alumni Council last February, and submitted to the College Board of Trustees at its meeting last June. The Board will probably consider the Council's recommendations at its next meeting the latter part of this month.

Dr. Haskell has served as a member of the Board of Trustees since 1930, when he was elected to the Board by Oberlin alumni. He is editor of the Kansas City Star. Dr. Gulick is Director of the Institute of Public Administration, and Eaton Professor of Municipal Science and Administration at Columbia University. He directed the Regent's Inquiry into the Character and Cost of Public Education in New York State, and was Director of Research for the Commission of Inquiry on Public Service Personnel. He is a past president of the Oberlin Alumni Association of New York City. His son, Halsey, is enrolled at Oberlin as a Freshman this year. Dr. Gulick received an honorary degree from Oberlin in 1939.

Alumni Executive Committee Meets

On October 12, the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association held a special meeting to consider plans for the present year. Although in the past this committee has usually met only twice a year, increased activity of the Association lately has made an October meeting necessary.

A new plan of campaign was adopted for the 1941 Alumni Fund marking a significant departure from the plan used in the past three years. This coming year, the work of Class Agents will be reduced materially as emphasis shifts from a total dependence upon personal letters to classmates for presentation of the Alumni Fund appeal, to a plan which includes mailing some material direct from the Alumni Office. Class Agents will this year be called upon to organize their assistants for the job of approaching members of their class who do not respond to initial appeals coming direct from the Alumni Office.

The 1941 program will also emphasize the importance of increasing the size of individual gifts wherever possible. A greater proportion of Oberlin alumni support their Alumni Fund than in any other co-educational college or university, but the average individual gift remains considerably below other similar schools. An increase is necessary, not only to permit a larger annual cash gift to the College, but also to expand the services offered by the Alumni Association to Oberlin alumni. The Alumni Association, unlike most such organizations, is com-

FIRST "OLD MASTER" FOR ART MUSEUM

THROUGH the special art fund set up by the gift of Mr. R. T. Miller, Jr., '91, the Oberlin Art Museum has acquired ownership of its first "Old Master" in the form of a panel from a triptych painted by a Florentine artist about 600 years ago. The purchase marks an important step in the program of the Museum to acquire gradually a number of first-rate art objects which will be available to students for study. In the past, students at Oberlin have often had to be content with study of reproductions of important works, if it is not possible to obtain the loan of originals.

Commenting upon the new acquisition, Professor Wolfgang Stechow, new member of the Fine Arts Department, has written: "Our little panel (17 $\frac{3}{4}$ x 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches) was not intended to be a separate picture such as it appears today. The fourteenth century did not have any conception of an easel painting done for its own sake such as is taken for granted by us, and as it developed since the days of Jan van Eyck—about one hundred years after this painting was done. From many analogous works (such as the complete triptych here illustrated) we are able to conclude with certainty that our picture formed one shutter of a small folding triptych, a small tabernacle probably made for private worship in the house of a well-to-do Florentine citizen. Its center piece contained the representation of an enthroned Madonna surrounded by angels and saints; the other shutter might have shown the Nativity of Christ or the Stigmatization of St. Francis, possibly combined with some other scene from the Bible or other saints. In addition there must have existed a very small triangular panel on top of our picture which showed the Madonna of the Annunciation. It, together with the corresponding angel on top of the opposing shutter, complemented the cuspidal form of the center piece which the two shutters had to cover when the triptych was closed."

The painter of our picture was Jacopo del Casentino. Very little is known about his life. "He was born," writes Professor Stechow, "somewhere in the Casentina, probably in Arezzo, worked in that town and in Florence where he became one of the founders of the Guild of St. Luke in 1339, and where he died in 1349 or 1358, possibly at the age of eighty."

Commenting on the figures in the picture itself, Professor Stechow says, "Christ has died on the cross for man; the silent mourning of his mother, the passionate lament of the Magdalen, the more representative grief of St. John are typical examples of man's attitude toward the Supreme Sacrifice. St. Anthony, the Abbot, identifiable by means of his charmingly life-like attribute, the little pig, looks on modestly, meditatively. Soft and unobtrusive colors, parsimoniously and accurately laid on the gold foil of the background, upon which the contours of the figures have been traced with a stylus, give a modest touch of reality to the quiet scene, the small scale of which required tender modulation rather than powerful modeling. The composition, difficult to handle because of the exceedingly high format of the panel, shows good poise and careful avoiding of crowded as well as of empty areas. There is a simple but fluent rhythm in spite of the special difficulty of uniting St. Anthony with the traditionally symmetrical group of the other four figures. Additional security of balance is provided by the refined but unostentatious pattern of the border."

Latest important purchase for

Professor Stechow dates the panel as having been done around 1340 or 1345, during the period of Jacopo's mature style. "The exemplar of the type of triptych to which it must have belonged had been set by Bernardo Daddi in the early 1330's; but at that time the shape of the scenes on the shutters was still cuspidal in itself. The rectangular form of our Crucifixion, with the separate part of the Annunciation above, was introduced by Daddi about five or ten years later (triptych in the Museum of Altenburg in Saxony) and eagerly adopted by his followers, including Jacopo. The rather bold addition of the figure of St. Anthony is unparalleled in other works of the master and would likewise point to a mature phase of the artist's career..."

JOHN FREDERICK OBERLIN ON A FOURTH CONTINENT

by Walter M. Horton

Professor of Systematic Theology

WE often speak of "Oberlin on three continents," meaning (1) the work of J. F. Oberlin in the Ban de la Roche (Europe), which inspired (2) the work of Oberlin College in Ohio (North America), which in turn inspired (3) the work of Oberlin-in-Shansi (Asia). These three Oberlins were symbolically united when earth from the graves of the Oberlin-in-China martyrs was carried by Robbins Strong to the grave of Oberlin in Alsace, and earth from Oberlin's grave was officially planted in the clay soil of Oberlin, Ohio, on the two hundredth anniversary of his birth.

I am pleased to be able to announce the discovery of a fourth Oberlin, on a fourth continent, South America. By this I do not merely mean to refer to the fact that Oberlin College graduates, and parents of Oberlin students, occupy significant positions in most of the principal centers of South America, as they do on other continents—especially in educational, missionary, and Christian Association work. Nor do I merely mean to refer to the fact that one of our graduates, Mrs. Scott P. Hauser, '14, and her husband, parents of Dick and Ruth Hauser now in college, are members of the unique agricultural mission of El Vergel, at Angol, Chile, where the name and life of John Frederick Oberlin are well known, and where the whole program strongly resembles his program in the Ban de la Roche. I am referring to a new movement for rural reconstruction in Brazil, directly inspired by the life of Oberlin himself, without any traceable connection with Oberlin in Ohio or in China. In this bicentenary year, such a movement is of special interest, as evidence that the spirit of our patron saint is not "a-mouldering in the grave," but "marching on" into its third century of world-wide beneficent influence.

My discovery took place in this way. I had been invited to speak to the students at a theological school in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and decided to speak, (as I often do when addressing students in other countries) on J. F. Oberlin and his influence. After I had spoken, one of the students asked me if I knew that a book about Oberlin had recently been published in Brazil. I expressed interest; and that night, the eve of my departure for Rio de Janeiro, he brought me a copy of the book, autographed by the author, Professor Otoniel Mota of Sao Paulo University. It proved to be a novel, in Portuguese of course, issued in 1937, at Rio de Janeiro, by the Centro Brasileiro de Publicidade, and entitled Perdeganba.

Oberlin in Brazilian novel

Perdeganba is a novel with a purpose. Its hero, Zusa, is a Brazilian boy of great intellectual promise but impoverished circumstances who leaves his country village to become a student at a (purely imaginary) school known as Oberlin College. The head of this school is a Swiss, Professor Dartigue, a great admirer of John Frederick Oberlin and desirous of carrying out his ideals in Brazil. Zusa, though obliged to work his way through school, becomes Professor Dartigue's most brilliant pupil, and writes an appreciative essay on John Frederick Oberlin which constitutes one whole chapter in the novel. After graduation Zusa returns to his native village, and at a crowded meeting in the village church, outlines a program of rural reconstruction based on Oberlin's principles. When we take our leave of the hero, he has won the blessing of his pastor, the hand of his sweetheart (daughter of an aristocratic family), and wide popular support for his projects.

A widely-traveled and observant man is Dr. Walter M. Horton of the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology. His recent travels include not only the South American tour mentioned in this article, but also a round-the-world tour two years ago. His books are widely-read, and are frequently listed as the Religious Book of the Month. His most recent is "Can Christianity Save Civilization?"

The author's purpose was to create in Brazil the kind of rural reconstruction movement described in the novel. In this he has been successful to the extent of provoking wide discussion of his ideas among students and pastors, and drawing to himself at least a few real disciples. Several Brazilian groups to whom I spoke concerning Professor Mota's vision of a new day in rural Brazil expressed the opinion that the time is now ripe for action along these lines. The government is very eager to promote the development of the remoter parts of the country, and would look sympathetically upon any attempt to enlist young people in the cause of rural welfare. Some Protestant ministers said that if they could persuade their youth to follow this new social frontier, in a spirit of sacrificial devotion to the public weal, instead of flocking to the cities in quest of pleasure and excitement, the Protestant churches (already stronger in Brazil than in any other South American country) might win a deservedly eminent place in the national life.

Upon request of Senor Mota and one of his disciples, President Wilkins has forwarded information about Oberlin College and its connection with J. F. Oberlin, while Mrs. Davis has forwarded information about Oberlin-in-China, with special reference to Ray Moyer's agriculture work and Mark Wu's rural reconstruction work. It would be very gratifying if some suggestions from North America or from Asia might help to give a good start to this very promising South American movement. As yet, it exists mainly in idea; when and if it comes to exist in fact, we can speak with full justification of "Oberlin on Four Continents."

UNDER THE ELMS

Lively Interest in Politics at Oberlin

Oberlin has had its share of Political speakers during the past campaign. Candidate Willkie spoke from his train at Elyria on October 2, where he was greeted by a large crowd of students carrying Oberlin banners. Candidate Norman Thomas spoke in Chapel on October 7. On the following day, the Democratic and Republican Party platforms were explained in a student assembly, and Governor Bricker of Ohio, candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket, spoke in the afternoon. On October 24, Mayor Burton of Cleveland, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate, spoke in Chapel, before a friendly student audience who remembered his capable work as Permanent Chairman of the Oberlin Mock Republican Convention last spring. He was followed by Congressman Stephen M. Young, Democrat, on October 30.

Plans for election night involved late permission for all women to attend a special "Rec" to hear the early returns.

Outstanding feature of the pre-election fever epidemic was the straw vote conducted by the Oberlin Review, which gave Willkie a landslide vote of 64.4% of the nearly 1,000 students participating. Roosevelt received only 25.7% of the votes; Thomas, Socialist candidate, drew 7.6%; and Earl Browder, Communist candidate, received 0.2%. Only 54% of the students believed that the "third term" should be a major issue in the campaign. Last May, a Review poll showed that 43.3% of the students favored the Republican Party; in the present poll, 62.5% of the students expressed preference for the Republican Party.

The Draft in Oberlin

Two hundred and thirty-seven men students of the College registered under the Selective Service Act, on October 16. In registering, only seven men listed themselves as conscientious objectors, although about thirty students attended a meeting held for those who might be considering registering as conscientious objectors. In addition to the college students, who registered in Warner Gym, 500 men registered in the village of Oberlin.

Student sentiment concerning registration and the Selective Service Training Act appears to be divided. A small group, carrying the name of the Peace Action Council, has come out in definite opposition to the draft. A larger group recognizes the need for the draft under present circumstances, but would oppose making conscription and universal military service a permanent institution in this country.

Present plans of the Federal Government do not include organization of

Professor J. D. Lewis, '28

Student Army Training Corps units on college campuses. Students now enrolled in college will not be subject to call before July 1, 1941. President Wilkins has stated that the distance from any good air field makes it impossible to organize a training course in aviation at Oberlin, such as has been set up at many colleges under the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Issues related to the war situation are catching the attention of all Oberlin students. The Peace and Public Affairs Forum, result of a merger of the old Oberlin Peace Society and Oberlin Public Affairs Society, has embarked upon a stormy career this year. Within its ranks appear many student groups urging opposing courses of action. The situation is further complicated by the political campaigns in progress this fall. The PPA Forum is attempting to federate these divergent groups within its general organization, but seems to be finding it a difficult job. With the close of the Presidential campaign, the temporary political clubs backing the fortunes of Willkie, Roosevelt, Thomas, and others will retire from the scene, and the debate will settle around several major issues. What will happen then remains to be seen.

Alumnus Brings Art Exhibit

The Allen Art Museum is exhibiting during November an excellent collection of modern French paintings, brought to America by Theodore Schempp, '26. The following distinguished clientele of museums and connoisseurs have generously loaned their paintings for this exhibition: George Warrington, "Danseuses" by Degas; Joseph Pulitzer, "Pierrot" by Roualt; Phillips Memorial Gallery, "Basilique de St. Denis" by Utrillo; Smith College, "Paysage du Midi" by Bonnard; Denver Museum, "Les Coulisses de l'Opera" by Forain; Springfield Museum, "Te Faruru" by Gauguin; Buell Hanett, "La Femme Brune" by Cassatt; the John Herron Art Institute, "Jeu de Glace" by Bonnard and "Fleurs" by Vuillard; Mrs. W. Powell Jones, "Portrait of Coco" by Renoir; L. C. Hanna, "Portrait of Teuraheimato" by Gauguin.

College Clarifies Liquor Rule

The General Faculty, after considering the old rule "The use of intoxicating liquors by students is forbidden," adopted a new regulation which reads, "The possession or use of alcoholic beverages on College property or in any house approved by the College for student residence is forbidden. Any misconduct resulting from the use of alcoholic beverages, in Oberlin or elsewhere, is subject to disciplinary action."

Enforcement of the rule will be the primary responsibility of two student groups, the Men's Board and the Women's Joint Council, which had recommended that the old rule be clarified in the interests of better enforcement.

Thomas Opened Artist Recital Series

John Charles Thomas opened the Oberlin Artist Recital Series on October 22, with a program of English, French, Italian, and German songs, including an entire section given over to American folk songs.

The second concert on the series was given by the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Artur Rodzinski, on October 29. The program included two symphonies: "A London Symphony" by Vaughn Williams; and "Fantastic Symphony," Opus 14a, by the French composer Berlioz.

Alumni Homecoming Day Brings Back Recent Grads

Giving the football team a start on the season at the first game, on October 5, with Rochester, about 100 Oberlin alumni returned for Homecoming Day. After seeing the Yeomen take their opponents into camp, as reported in the October issue, alumni repaired to Rec Hall in the Men's Building as guests of the Student Council at a Tea Dance. In the evening, they had Rec Hall to themselves for a Fireside Reunion Supper, followed by a Forum discussion sponsored by the Junior Alumni Council. Principal subjects discussed were the Glen Gray Scholarship and the records of the Gray Scholars, and the 1941 Alumni Fund plans.

Most colorful aspect of Homecoming Day is always the competition for loving cups awarded by the Alumni Association for the best decorated dormitory and store window. The dormitory decorations this year were superior in number and quality to any in recent years, and it was with great difficulty that the judges were able to select the winner, the Theological Quadrangle. The award for the best store window went to Comings' Book Store.

Campus Invaded by 1,250 High School Students

Taking on the busy, colorful aspect familiar at Commencement time, Oberlin played host to some 1,250 high school students, parents and teachers on October 19, for the twelfth annual High School Day. The College awarded sixteen scholarships and the Conservatory eight, to as many high school students who won first places in the competitive examinations in various fields of study. Campus tours were arranged for the visitors, featuring special exhibits by the various departments; the visitors were guests of the College at the Hamilton football game; and the day's program ended with the annual Student Revue and All-College Dance.

Summer School Session Discontinued

The Oberlin College Faculty voted early last month to discontinue the summer school session, effective next summer. This action was taken after a report on the shrinkage of attendance and financial loss to the college. Of the 104 students enrolled last summer, only 48 took full-time work. At the same time, 152 Oberlin students took summer work at other institutions. The deficit on the 1940 summer session amounted to approximately $700.

Spanish Gains in Popularity

A reflection of the present international situation is found in the increased popularity of Spanish on Oberlin's campus. Enrollment in Spanish courses jumped from 92 to 135, making it necessary to employ an additional part-time instructor. Mrs. Rica Brown is the new member of the staff to help in Spanish classes. She is a graduate of Oxford University, and has taught in private schools in England. She has traveled and studied extensively in Spain.

Freshman Girl Accidentally Killed

Jean Lawson, Oberlin freshman, was instantly killed when struck by an automobile on the main highway just outside Oberlin. The accident occurred on Sunday afternoon, October 6, when Miss Lawson and four friends went on a hike to earn points for their class numerals. The driver was not held, following investigation of the accident. Miss Lawson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Lawson of Hartford, Connecticut. Mrs. Lawson, the former Ada Adella Carpenter, graduated from Oberlin College in 1903.

Hospital Gets High Rating

Allen Memorial Hospital was recently visited by representatives of the American College of Surgeons who made their periodic inspection of its facilities and treatment of patients. Their report, received later, complimented the hospital on its "technical equipment, physical plant, and especially on its diagnosis and treatment of patients." During the past year it has had 8,203 days of hospital service, 1,333 more than any year since its beginning.

Faculty Notes

Professor-emeritus Edward Dickinson, who taught History and Criticism of Music at Oberlin from 1893 to 1922, celebrated his 87th birthday on October 10. He received a shower of cards, letters, and telegrams from many friends and former students. His health continues to improve following an accident on the ice last winter which resulted in a broken arm. He is now regaining the ability to play the piano.

Professor Clarence Ward of the Fine Arts department has been named the Charles T. Mathews Foundation Lecturer at Columbia University for 1940-41. He will give a series of ten weekly lectures on "Gothic Architecture" starting January 15. The lectures will be given at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

FINANCING OBERLIN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETICS

by Robert Kretchmar, '40

IT is always a bad thing to compare the relative merits of Oberlin athletics—past and present—to a group of young and old Oberlin alumni. Someone's feelings are apt to get hurt. The old grad sits complacently back and proudly exclaims, "Why argue? Just look at our record!" And the younger grad rejoins, "Yes, and look at your competition!" I am certainly not qualified to compare the old and the new; I am familiar with only one side of the story which would lead to a very biased comparison. However, I do feel equipped to criticize Oberlin's present-day athletic program.

Difference in objectives

It is fairly obvious, I believe, that when a "Big Ten" student and I sternly insist that our respective schools' athletic programs are successful, we are using different criteria for judgment. We should define our terms. His sole standard of judgment is probably his university's win or loss record. However, I believe (and it is by no means a new or unusual belief in these days) that a school's athletic program should be judged according to what it contributes to an athlete's education. Athletics, like any other phase of a school's curriculum or extra-curriculum, should be primarily educational. If they are not such, they have no place in an educational institution. By educational, I mean anything which helps fulfill one of the seven cardinal objectives of education as set up several years ago by a national educational congress. It is with the above in mind that I judge Oberlin's present athletic situation a healthy one.

It is almost needless to repeat the Oberlin athletic policy. We all know it to be: To compete with educational institutions similar to our own not only in size but also in scholastic standards. We can best understand and appreciate Oberlin's athletic program when we know how it is financed.

The athletic program at Oberlin, like any other phase of its educational program, is financed primarily through the college budget. True, some money is received from the student activity fee tickets and gate receipts, but the important thing to remember is that the program is not dependent upon gate receipts—gate receipts and all the attendant evils. It is our method of finance which permits us to maintain top-notch athletic fields, a qualified coaching staff, high-grade equipment, and a ten-sport intercollegiate athletic program—the largest of any college in Ohio.

Let us think that Oberlin's athletic situation is a Utopia, and not lacking in certain essentials, let me strike one sour note. We need a field house, and need it badly. Such a building would not only aid our intercollegiate program greatly but the intramural sports and the required physical education work as well. Because of her proximity to Lake Erie, Oberlin is handicapped with a prolonged winter season. Spring sports are especially handicapped. This is especially important in view of the fact that most of our competitors are located in southern and central Ohio where spring weather comes much earlier than here.

Equal emphasis on all sports in wide program

Recently a significant change has been made in our athletic program. All sports are now recognized on an equal basis; no longer is there a distinction made between so-called "major" and "minor" sports. Football and basketball schedules have been shortened, while soccer, swimming, and fencing schedules have been expanded. This change is witness to the fact that Oberlin regards one sport as important as the next. Also do these changes bear out the fact that Oberlin's athletic policy is more than merely some nebulous, idealistic beliefs.

In the present collegiate athletic world where athletes are being openly subsidized, coaches fired for losing games, faculty members coerced into giving special consideration to athletes, it is a pleasure to sit back and remind ourselves that: Oberlin players are not subsidized; our coaches' jobs are not dependent upon winning games; our football players do not have to practice three hours a day, nine months of the year; our alumni do not have to canvass high schools to send us potential stars; our faculty is not pushed to pass athletes; our tennis, golf, and other non-paying sports are not dependent for their existence upon a successful football season. Yes, all these things are made possible by our philosophy of athletics at Oberlin, which contends that athletics can and should be educational and should be financed accordingly.

Nichols compares other schools

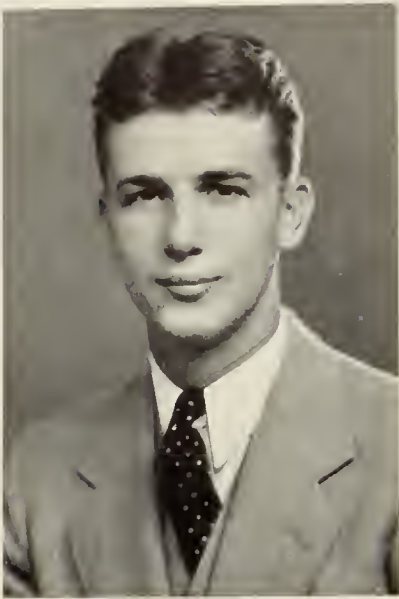

Further information concerning the financial basis of Oberlin's athletic program is found in a Chapel talk given last spring by Dr. J. H. Nichols, Director of Athletics. He said in part, "The intercollegiate sports program is financed from three sources. The first and principal source is the college budget, and includes all salaries of teachers and coaches, most of the maintenance and upkeep of gymnasium and fields, fully 60% of our operating expense. The second source is the guarantees of opponents and gate receipts from our home games, chiefly from football and basketball, usually about $6,000 in all. (Gate receipts amount to about $1,500 a year of this total.) The third source is the student activity fee, which brings in approximately $6,500 annually . . .

" . . . We try to see that all of our ten intercollegiate sports are adequately supported. During the depression, we were one of the few institutions that did not drop a single sport. Ohio Wesleyan, for example, has just this year dropped cross country, fencing, and golf, due to a decline in their gate receipts. Our athletes who have had the opportunity to compare the facilities, equipment, travel methods, and supervision with other schools in this section, realize how fortunate they are. A recent financial study of Ohio Conference schools revealed that we are putting twice as much money into the so-called non-income producing sports (cross country, soccer, swimming, fencing, tennis, and golf) as any other Ohio Conference school. In fact, we are the only school in Ohio maintaining one of these sports.

"The college and department policy is to provide the widest possible range of opportunities for sports and recreation with a minimum cost to the student. No charges are made for the use of the facilities of the various buildings, nor for the use of tennis courts or athletic equipment. Complete equipment is loaned in all varsity sports and in certain intramural class sports, such as football and baseball.

"Few, if any, institutions in the country provide as wide a range of opportunities at so little cost to the student. At Swarthmore, the activity fee is $50 and the athletic portion is $15, as compared with Oberlin's activity fee of $16.40, of which $4.25 is for the athletic program. At Hamilton, the athletic fee is $19; at Kenyon the activity fee is $25 and the athletic portion $16; at Rochester the activity fee is $20 and the athletic portion $12. Bruce Bennett, '39, wrote me a short time ago that one of the things he noticed most at Harvard, in comparison with Oberlin, was their charge for almost every athletic facility and opportunity offered . . ."

Robert Kretchmar, '40

Robert Kretchmar's experience on varsity teams in three sports for three years, including service as captain of football and basketball last year, especially qualifies him to speak on intercollegiate sports at Oberlin. This talk was given at the Men's Dinner in Oberlin last Commencement.

Kretchmar is now a graduate assistant in Physical Education at Ohio State University.

This article ends with a quotation from a talk by Dr. J. H. Nichols comparing Oberlin's practice with that of several other schools.

Dr. Alice H. Luce, who was Dean of Women and Professor of English at Oberlin from 1900 to 1904, died in Berkeley, California, on October 1, at the age of 79 years. She graduated from Wellesley College in 1883, and taught at the Boston Latin School for Girls before coming to Oberlin. After 1904, she went to Germany to assume charge of the Willard School for Girls in Berlin. During the war, the school was closed, and Dr. Luce returned to the United States. From 1920 to 1928, she was Professor of German at Mills College. She is said to be the first woman to receive the Ph.D. degree from the University of Heidelberg. She was buried in Auburn, Maine.

Dean Carl F. Wittke represented Oberlin College at the inauguration of Dr. Howard Landis Bevis as President of Ohio State University, on October 24 and 25. Before coming to Oberlin, Dean Wittke was Professor of History at Ohio State.

Curtis Anderson, Assistant Director of Admissions, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Ohio College Field Representatives Association at its annual meeting at Kenyon College, Gambier, on October 30. Anderson will, under the rules of the Association, succeed to the presidency next year. Anderson reported to the meeting that 27.7% of the students enrolled at the 24 member Ohio colleges came from outside the state. At Oberlin, however, 68% of the students come from outside Ohio. Oberlin's student body came last year from 46 states and 22 foreign countries.

Miss Marguerite Woodworth, Dean of Women, spoke on Honors Day at Pembroke College, Brown University, in Providence, Rhode Island, on October 22.

Lynds Jones, '92, Professor-emeritus of Animal Ecology, is chairman of the local draft board in Oberlin, comprising District No. 4 of Lorain County. An Oberlin alumnus is one of his assistants, Ira D. Shaw, '98, who recently retired from the faculty of Berea College.

Louis E. Lord, '97, Professor of Classics, recently purchased an important interest in the Oberlin News-Tribune. He and his daughter, Priscilla, bought out Sam L. Powers, who had been vice-president and assistant business manager for several years. Charles Mosher, '28, acquired a controlling interest in the Oberlin Printing Company last February, and is president. It is expected that at the next meeting of Note: To give a complete picture, we should also remember that Oberlin College spent from its general funds $40,323.53 for the Men's Physical Education Department. Included in this figure are salaries of coaches, and other items chargeable to intercollegiate sports. It would be difficult to determine what exact proportion of this amount went for intercollegiate athletics. The College also spends approximately $4,500 annually for up-keep of the men's athletic fields and tennis courts.

ATHLETICS

Cross Country Team Wins Four in a Row

Opening their season on Homecoming Day, October 5, with an 18-42 win over Bowling Green State University, Oberlin's distance runners have shown themselves to be of championship calibre. While the squad has good individual performers, yet the scores attest to the number of fast men composing the entire team.

Feature of the meet with Ashland on October 12, was, of course, the star performance of Gilbert Dodds, Ohio Conference Cross Country Champion, who returned to the Oberlin track to again break the course record in the fast time of 20:37.3. However, his teammates were no match for the Oberlin crew, who took the event with a score of 20-43. Stimulated by Dodds' performance, Bob Wear, Oberlin's fastest man, bettered his previous end-of-season record of last year by almost a full minute. Seven Oberlin runners came in before the second Ashland man crossed the finish line.

The Oberlin speedsters gave an even worse drubbing to Case on October 21, when they took the meet with the great score of 18-43 on the Oberlin course. Wear, Anderson, and Day crossed the line before the first Case man finished the course.

In their first away-from-home meet of the season, the Oberlin harriers met Wooster on their new course on October 26. They made short work of the Wooster men, three Oberlin men leading the way at the finish before the first Wooster man came in. Wear, in taking first, set a course record on Wooster's new course of 20 minutes, 47 seconds. He was followed by Anderson and Day. Oberlin took seven of the eight places to win with a score of 17-46.

Soccer Team Loses Two Tough Ones

In their first game of the season, Oberlin's soccer team lost to Grove City, Pennsylvania, 1-0. After outplaying the Pennsylvania team throughout the game, Oberlin lost in the final 30 seconds when the ball bounced off Captain Bill Fisher's knee into pay dirt.

In their second set-to, Oberlin gave a good account of itself in an encounter with Slippery Rock, Pennsylvania, an experienced team which plays an annual schedule of 15 matches, as compared with Oberlin's four games. Taking advantage of the wind in the first and third quarters, the visitors from Slippery Rock scored once in each period to make the final score 2-0.

Oberlin is the only Ohio college to have a varsity soccer squad; hence the difficulty in finding opponents without going considerable distances. As in the case of Slippery Rock, some of the teams scheduled are much better experienced than Oberlin, which has taken up the sport seriously only in the past few years.

Yeomen Overwhelm Allegheny, 43-0

After smashing Rochester on October 5, to the tune of 20-12, Oberlin ran up its biggest score since 1920, when the Yeomen defeated Allegheny in a one-sided contest, 43-0. The score might have run to a much higher figure had not Coach Butler run in all three of his teams during the game. Even Oberlin's third team was able to give a good account of itself against the Gators. Desperate Allegheny tried 14 passes to complete two; gained only 72 yards rushing, to Oberlin's 354 yards; and punted an average of only 29 yards, to Oberlin's 41 yards.

Oberlin Downs Hamilton, 13-12

Although Oberlin came out on the long end of the score in the third football game of the season, it was because the Yeomen got the breaks in the closing minutes of play. With a minute and ten seconds to play, Oberlin received a Hamilton fumble on the 20-yard line. Two penalties on Hamilton brought the ball back to the one-yard stripe, and Co-Captain Briggs took the ball over for the touchdown.

Combined rain and snow prevented both teams from resorting to aerial attacks during the game; Oberlin tried nine to complete two, while Hamilton completed two out of six attempts. Game statistics show that Hamilton had the edge on Oberlin in most departments, but the team as a whole looked much better than in the Rochester game.

Swarthmore Swamped, 14-13

The fourth straight win of the season was a hair-raising experience for the 200-odd Oberlin fans who assembled at Swarthmore to see the Yeomen play. Swarthmore pulled out of its bag of tricks the usual good brand of ball, just the type of plays which Oberlin was supposed to be ready to cope with successfully. But somehow, during the entire first half, Oberlin's defense was unable to stop the Garnet team, which proceeded to roll up 175 yards and two touchdowns during that time.

But in the second half it was as if the Swarthmore lads were playing an entirely different team. They were able to gain a total of only 53 yards during the second half, and Oberlin effectively stopped their aerial attack. The Yeomen, on the other hand, let loose with an aerial attack which brought frenzied Oberlin fans to their feet with hoarse cheers. The combination of a stone-wall defense, only broken once for a good Swarthmore gain in the second half, and a successful aerial attack spelled defeat for the home team.

With about five minutes to play, the score stood 13-7 in Swarthmore's favor. Oberlin was on the forty-yard line on fourth down with several yards to go. Briggs called a pass, and shot a long throw down the middle of the field. Almost miraculously, Beers shook off two Swarthmore men and reached up to get the ball as it sailed over the goal line to tie the score. No less remarkable was the kick for the point after the touchdown, which went just wide enough to miss a charging Swarthmore man and yet clear the bars for the point that brought victory.

It was Swarthmore's Homecoming Day, and the day of the inauguration of its new president. It was Saturday, October 26, a red letter day for every Oberlin alumnus who saw the game.

Wittenberg Takes the Yeomen Into Camp, 19-7

Oberlin's winning streak was rudely broken by Wittenberg on November 2, when it suffered its first loss of the season by the decisive score of 19-7. The game was not as one-sided as the score indicates, for Oberlin got 16 first downs to Wittenberg's 14, and the Yeomen took the ball down to the ten-yard line twice to threaten a score.

Oberlin's one touchdown came in the third quarter after Wittenberg fumbled on the 50-yard line. The drive which followed took the ball across the line, and Fullback Wilson place-kicked the extra point.

ALUMNI CLUBS

Cleveland Alumni Hears Sears; Meet New Trustee

Over two hundred Oberlinites from northeastern Ohio and Greater Cleveland attended the twelfth annual alumni luncheon, held at the time of the convention of the Northeastern Ohio Teachers' Association. Included in the group were 32 members of the Oberlin faculty who attended as guests of the luncheon committee, of which Arthur Dunscombe, '18, of Bedford, Ohio, was chairman.

Honored guest at the luncheon was Federal District Judge Robert N. Wilkin, newest Cleveland member of the College Board of Trustees. Judge Wilkin was introduced by Louis S. Peirce, '28, President of the Alumni Association of Oberlin College.

Professor Paul B. Sears, of the Botany department, was the speaker. In speaking on "Putting a New Face on Ohio," Professor Sears described the change in Ohio's landscape resulting from the coming of the white man; how clearing of land affected the flow of streams, the construction of drainage systems carried away water so rapidly in many instances as to reduce the fertility of the soil. Only in recent years, he declared, has man made a real study of the conservation of our land resources with long-time good in mind. He mentioned especially the Muskingum Conservancy District project as an example of good planning. Judge Wilkin was instrumental in the formation of this conservation project.

Charles Galanie, '23, of Lakewood, Ohio, was nominated chairman of the 1941 luncheon committee.

Oberlin Men in Cleveland to Organize

At the luncheon of Oberlin alumni in Cleveland, on November 1, held in conjunction with the convention of the Northeastern Ohio Teacher's Association, Joseph W. Meriam, President of the Oberlin Alumni Club of Cleveland, announced that plans were in the making for a meeting of Oberlin men in Cleveland in the near future. A successful meeting of Oberlin men in Cleveland last spring has given rise to the suggestion that a regular organization of men be formed. At the proposed meeting, date of which will be announced soon, the formation of an Oberlin Men's Club in Cleveland will be considered.

Cincinnati, Ohio

Alumni of Cincinnati gathered for dinner and an evening meeting on November 14, at the Eastern Hills Y. M. C. A. Movies of Oberlin were shown and Alumni Secretary Carroll Shaw spoke. Harry Zekind, '26, was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, composed of: Mrs. Jay Bouwman (Charmian Sass, '35); Charles Mileham, '26; Alfred Pecsok, '28; Clayton Howe, '10; Mrs. DeWitt Gunsolus (Josephine Grosvenor, '27); and Herbert Weinberg, '37.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Pittsburgh Oberlin alumni met in Highland Park, Pittsburgh, for a picnic supper on September 28. New officers were chosen. Best time was had by the younger set who kicked a football around the park.

Detroit, Michigan

Members of the Detroit club heard Dr. Phillip Adler, foreign correspondent for the Detroit News, at their meeting on October 11.

Akron Women

"Post Mortem on the Campaign" was the subject of a lecture given by Professor P. T. Fenn of the Oberlin Political Science Department for the Akron Women's Club on November 13, at the Y. M. C. A. The meeting was thrown open to the general public.

Cleveland Women

Cleveland women, with their husbands and friends, met on November 12, to see the Baldwin Filter Plant, new addition to Cleveland's interesting municipal utilities system.

Chicago Women See

Oberlin Movies

The Oberlin Women's Club of Chicago met at the home of Mrs. Halsey Matteson (Anna Pitkin, '89) on October 12, with the president, Mrs. E. J. F. Young (Helen Templeton, '26) presiding. Alumnae from all over the city were present to see the moving pictures of the Oberlin campus and of the Mock Convention, and to hear news of the campus, presented by Miss Ruth Armstrong, '37.

A benefit musicale was held on November 9, at the home of Mrs. W. L. Templeton. The artists were Miss Ruby Shaw, '40, member of the faculty of Monticello College, Godfrey, Illinois; Helen Riddell Gutheil, and Robert Bowlus, '38, voice teacher at the Chicago Latin School. For six years the club, assisted by the Oak Park Women's club, has raised a scholarship for a girl attending Oberlin from the Chicago area. They also contribute a second scholarship to a superior, but under-privileged, girl attending a Chicago high school who would be unable to continue her course because of poverty.

For Bruce Davis' Ambulance Fund

Professor Bruce Davis, '03, of the Conservatory, went to England last year on sabbatical leave, and has since been serving as an A. R. P. Warden on the fortress island. He has been unable to secure transportation back to the United States to resume his teaching duties, and so is continuing to help in Britain. He has participated in a series of concerts to raise funds for purchase of an ambulance. Interested friends in Oberlin have already sent a substantial sum to Professor Davis to swell his fund, through the local paper, the Oberlin News-Tribune.

Dr. Howard Curtis, '15, past president of the club, who presided over the meeting, introduced the new president, Don B. Corbin, '28. Alumni Secretary Shaw outlined to the group the relationship between the alumni clubs and the Alumni Association of Oberlin College, and described the organization of the Association. He stressed the policy of the Association to help each club carry forward the kind of program it wanted, and stated that no demand is made upon the clubs as organizations by the general association.

The Philadelphia club will include in its membership all alumni living in the vicinity of the city; they number about 225 persons.

Columbus, Ohio

An evening meeting was held by the Columbus alumni on November 11, at which Alumni Secretary Carroll Shaw showed Oberlin movies and spoke. Harry Marshall, '97, new president of the club, made the arrangements.

Homemaking

IS OUR BUSINESS

You are cordially invited to use our Interior Decorating Service which for many years has been a vital factor in the creation of beautiful interiors for homes and public buildings.

By carefully planning and assembling appropriate furnishings for every room—satisfactory results are assured; and when this is done by one of our experienced decorators who has a wealth of stock from which to choose, a beautifully appointed room becomes an accomplished fact.

Our Interior Decorating Service can help you in many ways; by assembling draperies, floor covering and slipcovers in harmonious groups; by working out a suitable color scheme for an individual room; by selecting furnishings that are appropriate with the architectural features. And there is no extra charge for this service—you pay for the furnishings only and have the satisfaction of knowing that what you have purchased is "just right."
